FROM THE DESK OF EDITOR

Dear Readers,

‘To me, the greatest pleasure of writing is not what it’s about, but the inner music the words make.’ -Truman Capote.

In agreement with the above quote, I find writing as the most valuable literary expression. The inculcation of passion for creative thinking and writing amongst the students is one of the major objectives of Royal Global School. This year the creative juices of the students of the School and the North East region got unleashed with the organization of the Katha Utsav, where the ignited minds met various famous poets and writers. Hogwarts, the School of Witchcraft and Wizardry, got real for the kids in the carnival called ‘Alohomora’. The children created their own magic potions, dressed like the characters of Hermione, Ron, and Harry and performed in the Yule Ball and the Flash mob. The advent of Yog Guru Ram Dev Baba to school had kindled the importance of spirituality and health among the students through his interactions with the impressionable minds. The enthralling ambience of the school smoothly ushered in the Christmassy spirit and merry making by the end of the year through ‘Picasso At Work’, where the young ones produces master pieces of art with their parents. The students from across the school participated in interesting and thought-provoking debates, cookery competition and cyber fest, showed their sportsmanship in various state level and national sports and racked their minds to critical thinking and creative exercises. Not to forget the trip to old age home, underprivileged school in Nortap Village and getting selected for the certificate course to London. The school has worked hard to improve and excel in the year that just gone by with more promises and beautiful dreams to be accomplished with the steering of the New Year.

Happy Reading!

London Trip

A group of 32 beaming students from Royal Global School, along with teachers Angshurekha Choudhury, Mawmita Dutta and Arup Deka set out on the 23rd of September, 2017, for an unforgettable trip to London. Excitement ran high as the students made their way through the airports of Guwahati and Delhi, before the long flight to Heathrow. Landing the next day, the group bit tired, the students were nonetheless excited for the Walking Tour Scheduled that evening, where they saw the prize jewels of London City, as they circled Big Ben, Buckingham Palace and Westminster Abbey, amongst other famous political and royal sights. Touring behind time, the group retired for the night after an English dinner. Travelling by London Tube the next morning kick hooked up with Chris, the guide for the trip, and made their way to The Stay Club, Colindale, their accommodation for the week to come. Though a started the excitement for the day. The students and the teachers reached LSC Stanton for the first day of the English Improvement lessons. It was a whole lot of fun, meeting local tutors and learning about the intricacies of the language and its usage, as well as the differences in Indian and foreign cultures. The afternoon was spent in the sprawling British Museum, with the most spell-binding Rosetta Stone itself on display. The day of learning ended with dinner in an Italian Restaurant, after which the group retired, already looking forward to the next day. After the classes on the second day, a short ride on the underground was taken to the London Eye. Riding on the slowly rising massive Ferris wheel was a delight, which was followed by a quick paced tour down the riverside, where the Globe Theatre became the sight of the day, with its incredible Shakespeare memorabilia. A plan to the Science Museum was planned on the fourth day after the classes, followed by a visit to Harrods's, one of the largest stores in London. The students fulfilled all their shopping desires while exploring the large, classical British store. Dinner was taken at the astounding Planet Hollywood, and the tired students went to bed satisfied with the incredible day. The most awaited part of the journey was on the fifth day when the group was bundled into a bus to Oxford. The walk across various colleges of Oxford was like entering into a medieval world of architecture where the famous literature and poets walked and their superfluous emotions took form of drama and poems. The group was taken to Exeter College and to the Blackwell's, a famous bookshop in Oxford. Indeed a marvellous end to the day, the wide-eyed and excited students slowly climbed through the floors and purchased their books, just in time for the shop to close. The sixth day of the trip marked the end of the English Improvement classes, in which all the students had learnt quite a bit and understood a lot about British culture. Bidding LSC Stanton and its teachers farewell, the next stop was Canary Wharf and the Docklands Museum, both places of culture and learning. On the last day of touring, a bus took the Royalites to Brighton for a full day excursion which was well-enjoyed by all. It featured a trip to Brighton's Sea Life Centre too. Finally, on the 1st of October, the group checked out of the Stay Club and tearfully bid Chris goodbye as they made their way through the passageways of Heathrow. The trip to London was an unforgettable one indeed, with the daily lunch at a local pizzeria, the walking, the beauty of the city, the magic of the fast paced underground system, and above all, the experience of life in a place so different from home, yet one never made us feel as such.

In Conversation with Srutimala Duara

The big challenge for teachers is not simply getting students to read – it’s getting them to enjoy it too,” was the highpoint in Srutimala Duara’s book launch and reading session at Royal Global School on 24th November, 2017. She cited that reading aloud to students of all ages, including teenagers, is a vital part of any reading programme. During the session, the students intently heard Duara recite her poem “Between the Blooms” and their smiles and joyous laughter, enthusiastic responses, shrieks in awe and spontaneous clapping towards the end said it all.

“Reading aloud is always enjoyable, stimulates interest, imagination and exposes students to the joy of reading. I believe reading aloud from the best of children’s literature should be a daily part of every classroom programme at all level which is a captivating experience in itself” mentioned Srutimala Duara during her interaction with the young minds.

Duara’s collection of rhymes “Padya Mato Aha’ published by Sumitra Jogee on behalf of AANK-BAAK was launched amidst the presence of the junior school students and faculty members.

Students initiated an interactive session with the inmates gradually. A prayer to the Almighty followed several songs, recitation and story telling by the elderly. ## Discipline doesn't come from books...

Royalites Sohail Kazi and Ananya Khaund in conversation with Director A.K.Sinha- an educationist par excellence and a sterling administrator in his good office.

Sohail and Ananya: What made you decide to become an educationist?

Director: My teachers. I found the way school teachers conducted themselves; their dedication towards students, is a way in which one can earn while doing good service to the making of good human beings. I have two reasons, the second is that there are some things a teacher should not do. If I become a teacher, I would do the things that a teacher should do.

S&A: What is your vision for this school?

D: To be even better than before. Today should be better than yesterday and tomorrow should be better than today. There is always room for improvement and there should be movement towards betterment. Focused achievement is not a goal but a journey.

S&A: What were your favourite subjects as a student?

D: English. I grew up in an Indian environment and spoke English only at school. English is a convenient language. Language is best understood when used in conversations. When you start thinking in the language, it stands beside you, in front of you and behind you. Communication then becomes easy.

S&A: What, in your view, should an ideal student be like?

D: Naughty. A student should have fun, play pranks and enjoy oneself. Yet, they should give enough time to studies as they give to other activities. An ideal student must be focused.

S&A: Do you think students today are as competitive as they used to be?

D: There is no dearth in competition. Maybe students are ever more competitive than before. The problem is focus. Many find it difficult to choose a direction.

S&A: What is the ideal teacher-student relationship?

D: The two must have faith in each other. If there is faith, everything else rolls together. Faith is established when both the teacher and the student does their job honestly.

S&A: Who is your biggest inspiration?

D: My father is my biggest inspiration.

S&A: What message would you like to give students about discipline?

D: Discipline doesn't come from books. It comes from within. It is a routine which is followed with sanctity. The sun follows a routine. It rises and sets according to its routine. The stars follow a routine. With a routine, chaos would ensue. A student's life without discipline, lies in chaos, non-performance, doubt, and lack of self-confidence being its outcome.

S&A: How long have you been associated with schools?

D: I have been associated with schools for 30 years.

S&A: Thank you Sir.
